There is ſome ill a bruing towards my reſt,
For I did dreame of money baggs to night.
Clowne. I beſeech you ſir goe, my young Maſter doth expect your reproach.
Shy. So doe I his.
Clowne. And they have conſpired together, I will not ſay you ſhall ſee a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my noſe fell a bleeding on blacke monday laſt, at ſixe a clocke ith morning, falling out that yeere on aſhwenſday was foure yeare in th'afternoone.
Shy. What are there maskes? heare you me Ieſſica,
Locke up my doores, and when you heare the drumme,
And the vile ſqueaking of the wry-neckt Fiffe,
Clamber not you up to the caſements then,
Nor thruſt your head into the publique ſtreete,
To gaze on Chriſtian fooles with varniſht faces:
But ſtop my houſes eares, I meane my caſements,
Let not the ſound of ſhallow foppery enter
My ſober houſe. By Iacobs ſtaffe I ſweare,
I have no minde of feaſting forth to night:
But I will goe: goe you before me ſirra,
Say I will come. Clowne. I will goe before ſir.
Miſtres looke out at window for all this,
There will come a Chriſtian by
Will be worth a Iewes eye.
Shy. What ſayes that foole of Hagars off-ſpring? ha.
Ieſ. His words were farewell miſtris, nothing els.
Shy. The patch is kinde enough, but a huge feeder,
Snaile-ſlow in profit, and he ſleepes by day
More then the wilde-Cat: drones hive not with me,
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waſt
His borrowed purſe. Well Ieſſica goe in,
Perhaps I will returne immediatly,
Doe as I bid you, ſhut doores after you, faſt binde, faſt finde.
A Proverbe never ſtale in thriftie minde. Exit.
Ieſ. Farewell, and if my fortune be not croſt,
I have a Father, you a daughter loſt. Exit.
